

If I Was God ...

If I was God
I'd start all over again
I'd build an earth
All lush and green
Without the war and pain
If I was God,
I'd start all over again

In the beginning, God created the earth and the abundance thereof

In a garden of plenty He placed a man and a woman;
Well fed, without fear or want. He was no ruling tyrant.
Their's was a life of peace and tranquillity; no wars, no sickness, no death.

They were no puppets to be manoeuvred about – to them God gave freewill.

If you were God,
What would you do?
Your men have gone astray.
They fight and squabble,
Kill and maim.
They hunger, thirst and die.
Would you in all your love
Come down and show the way?
Would you heal their wounds;
Bear their pain?
Would you feed and comfort them?
Is your love big enough
To overlook their scorn and pride?
They chose their way!
If you were God,
What would you do?

Lyn Sibley